RELIEVES THE WORST CASES OF CATARRH
Think Hyomei the Most Wonderful Treatment for Catarrh Ever Discovered.
Do not try to cure catarrh by using sprays or lotions; it cannot be cured in that manner. The only way in which this too common disease can be fully relieved is through a direct application to the affected parts that will kill the bacilli of catarrh and prevent their growth.
Breathing the air of Hyomei is the only known method of treatment that can really accomplish this. It is the simplest, most pleasant and probably the most reliable treatment for catarrh that has ever been discovered.
The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and consists of an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks. This will effect instant relief in ordinary cases, but for chronic and deep-seated cases of catarrh, longer use may be necessary, and then an extra bottle of Hyomei can be obtained for a trifling sum. It is not alone the best (it might be called the only) method of treating catarrh, but it is also the most economical.
Fred D. Pierce has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to relieve catarrh, that he will for a limited time, sell this medicine under his personal guarantee to refund the money if the purchaser can say that it did not benefit.
Sold and guaranteed in Orleans by F. J. Kinney.

Blind Death

By M. QUAD
[Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

We were hunting among the Black Hills soon after the first rush of homesteaders and speculators in that direction, and one day I left camp on my own hook and wandered away three or four miles. As I stood resting beside a tree I saw a deer only a pistol shot away. It was a fine buck, and he walked into the open as cool and unconcerned as if nobody had ever thirsted for his life.

I ought to have dropped him dead at that distance, but he fell at my fire to get up and limp away, and, knowing him to be mortally wounded, I followed after. The ground was very rough and covered with cedar thickets, and, being a bit excited, I pushed on as fast as possible and paid little heed of what was underfoot. Of a sudden I found myself falling, and as I went down I dropped my gun to clutch at the branches. I went down ten or twelve feet over rocks, struck on my feet and then plunged forward and brought up beside a big detached rock with a smash severe enough to have killed me outright. I did break two ribs and terribly bruise my hip and fainted away with the pain.

When I came to I was lying on my right side, facing the jungle of rocks over which I had fallen, and I realized at once that I was badly hurt—just how badly I hesitated to find out, remembering that I was miles away from camp and could expect no help. I lay quiet, hoping the pains would soon go away, when I got such a shock as nearly put my wits to sleep again. Almost in front of me and only twenty-five feet away was the mouth of a den in the face of the cliff, and out of this den stalked the largest panther I had ever seen. He stood snuffing the air and looking full at me, and when I realized how helpless I was even to utter a call for aid I almost lost consciousness.

The wind was blowing pretty freely, and, luckily for me, it blew toward me. At first this was not of the slightest importance to my mind, as the beast could reach me with one spring, but I soon had reason to conclude that he was a queer animal. He turned to the left and trotted over the ground a distance of about fifty feet; then he wheeled and passed the den by about the same distance. When he had gone over the beat two or three times I discovered what was the matter. As he came toward me the sun shone full in his face, and I saw that he was stone blind. There was a white film over each eye, and he could not have seen a tree in his path.

Disease or accident had blinded him, but he possessed every other power nature gives to the dreaded beast—grace, litheness, strength—death! There is a curious fascination in watching the beast as he takes his promenade. I forget my pains as I rejoice over his blindness. Had he been possessed of his erstwhile vision—aye, could he but see ever so little—he would spring upon me, fasten those long yellow fangs into my throat, and in thirty seconds all would be over. But he is blind. He cannot discover my presence if I remain quiet. Heaven save me!

A shift of the wind, which here circles around and eddies about, has carried him the scent. He stops midway in his promenade, rears up and sniffs the air with a savage growl, and my heart beats so that it seems he must surely hear it and follow the sound until his hot breath is on my face. Sniff! Sniff! Growl! To the right, to the left, straight ahead! There; he's lost it as the wind eddies about, and now he stands stock still and utters a continuous growl as he waits to catch it again. No, not like a statue. His long tail sweeps the ground in a half circle, and his ears work swiftly back and forth. Blind Death waiting to rend, bite, tear and kill!

The scent again. He rears up, whirrs about three or four times as if on pivot, and now he points full at me. A tapeline fifteen feet long would cover the distance between us—between where I lie helpless as he crouches for a spring. If those sightless eyes could be restored how they would glint and glitter and blaze. Growl! Growl! W-r-r-r!

There's something in the sound which chills my blood—a menace, a warning of what is to come which bids me shut my eyes and utter a last prayer. Why does he hesitate? What delayed his spring? Ah, the wind has shifted again, and now his infirmity reasons against his natural ferocity. He has been blind for a year or two, perhaps. He has never left the cave except to move up and down over that one route. If he leaves it, if he springs at me, he may fall over a cliff for all he can tell. Had the scent held a moment longer he might have attacked, but now the breeze freshens up, the leaves around him are blown fither, and he is seeming to argue that his quarry has passed on and is out of his reach. Blind Death crept back to his cave and entered it with mutterings of savage disappointment. Well for me that his mate was not home and did not return until I had managed to drag myself out of the neighborhood and secure assistance to reach camp. Had there been eyes to see me Blind Death might now be flinging my cracked and whitened bones about his dark den as he rolls himself in sportive mood.

Is That So?
Nobody will deny that the actual necessities of human life are simple. Add a scanty article of clothing and a club to the menage of one of the larger animals, and give him a fire along with the needs of a primitive supplied. Three or four days of hunger in an open boat will bring the most highly civilized man to accept with avidity food that that ape would reject. The matter of requirements is not an exact science—it is altogether dependent upon the point of view.—Exchange.

Hard Job.
One of the hardest jobs I know of is to take a ride, when you're feeling nice and sociable, in a left-hand-drive machine with a fellow who is deaf in the right ear and has to stop the car and turn his head toward you every time you make a remark to him.—Farm Life.
